BURGERSDORP

Notice No. 48/2019-2020 Date: 01 November 2019

'Take me with you,' said the Peking duck to dead guy

What do you want to be buried with?

TYMON SMITH

What do Chinese takeaways, a false leg, a cellphone, a Wizard of Oz costume, a violin, a pair of clown shoes and an autographed tennis ball have in common? No, this is not a list of things found in a famous dead actor's attic but rather some of the most requested items that people wish to be buried with.

That's according to Funeralcare in the UK, which surveyed 4,000 adults and interviewed funeral directors who, according to The Independent, have "conducted more than 500,000 funerals between them over the last five years".

The tradition of burying objects in graves stretches back thousands of years and indicates ideas that humans have had about the afterlife and what they might need to navigate it. God forbid that the takeaway menu in heaven is all Italian and Mediterranean dishes, and doesn't allow for a good chow

Or that Dorothy, the Scarecrow, the Lion and the Tin Man have been sent to hell—leaving it up to you and your trusty Wizard of Oz costume to re-somewhere over the rainbow, way up high where the dreams that you dream of really do come true. Depending on your violin and guitar playing abilities you may serenade cherubs or join the world's worst band in Hades.

What the value of your autographed tennis ball will be is anyone's guess, but apparently one person would rather take it with them than leave it to their family to haggle over. One in five of those inter-
